Kia ora, Talofa lava, afio mai, 'nāmōstet , pai ata, Kuja hapa, greetings,

สวัสดี, 欢迎 and malo e lelei, Salaam

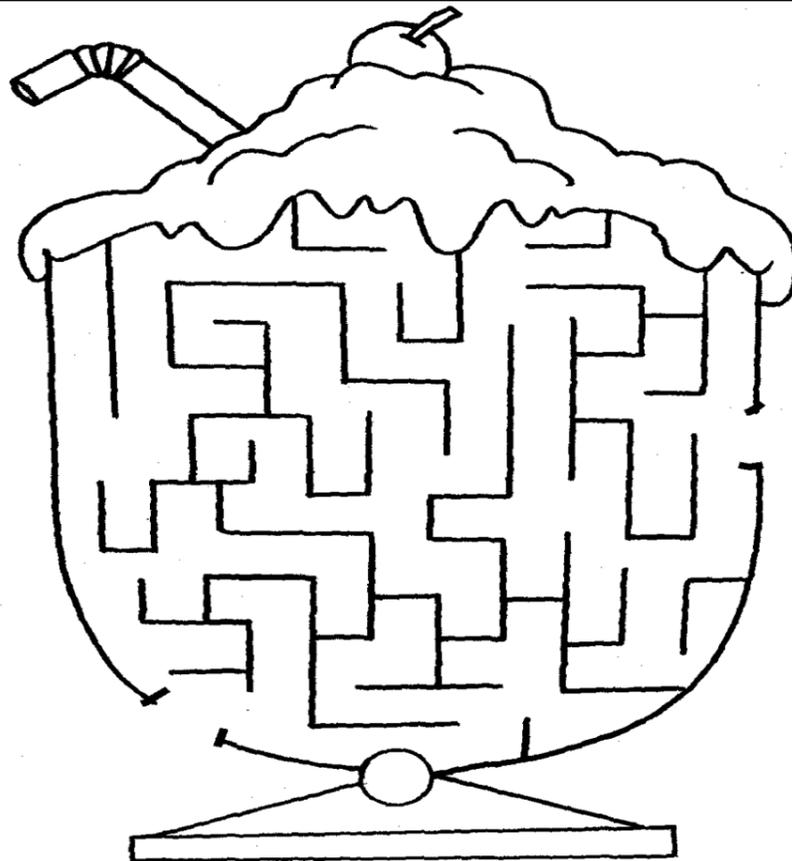

I hope you all had a great weekend, and enjoyed the beautiful weather. With the end of term coming up soon, teachers and classes are humming along with teaching and learning. Plans are beginning for the BIG DAY IN which we have not had all together for a couple of years.

We have opportunity to give out a number of picture books which have been withdrawn from our library.

We are currently working with National library to restock our beautiful library. We have been lucky enough to have a set of new books on loan for next year.

Take care everyone and stay safe

Margaret Samson (Principal)

Mr. Wolf is not guilty By Cooper

I know for a fact that Mr. Wolf is not guilty. Mr. Wolf was trying to do something nice for his granny by making a cake but didn't have any sugar so he went to his neighbors. As Mr. Wolf arrived at piggie number one's house, he knocked on the door and it fell to the ground. Mr. Wolf called out and no one answered so he decided to leave. But then he felt a great sneeze coming, he tried to hold his sneeze but let it go by accident. He blew down the house and saw a dead pig. Mr. Wolf arrived at piggie number two's house and tried asking for some sugar, but the second pig did not answer. Then the same thing that happened to the first pig happened once again. Mr. Wolf needed to sneeze again and tried to hold it in, but he let it go. Mr. Wolf saw piggie two lying down dead. The pig's houses fell only because the materials of the pig homes were weak and they could have used better materials to build a house instead of hay and sticks. When Mr. Wolf arrived at the third pig's house he knocked on the door and called out to the third pig but he just said get out wolf and never bother me again. Mr. Wolf did eat the first two pigs, so he should get a jail sentence but he shouldn't get a long sentence since he did not eat the pigs alive nor did he kill them. So, with all that said, I highly suggest that Mr. Wolf gets a shorter jail sentence, as he only wanted a cup of sugar for his sweet old granny's cake.

WOLF IS GUILTY By Yesung

I think the wolf is guilty because he committed crimes against the pigs. He is discriminating against the pigs. The wolf blew their houses down; ate two pigs and then behaved like it wasn't all his fault. Wolf has broken somebody else's property without any permission. When the house broke down the pigs died. Wolf says that he sneezed and this broke the house down, so it was an accident. But, could he not have turned around to face the other way, preventing the house from blowing down? If Wolf had gone to the local supermarket instead of making a fuss with the pigs, there would have been no accidental blowing down of houses and killing of pigs. Eating the dead pigs was unacceptable. He should have called someone to help give them a respectable burial, explaining to them that he had 'accidentally' killed the pigs. The right action would have been to turn himself in. If he did this there would be no big bad Wolf. In conclusion Wolf is guilty for destroying properties, committing crimes and affecting others. Wolf should get legal punishment.

Guilty/not guilty

Mr Wolf is INNOCENT! He just needed a small cup of sugar and had a horrible cold. The pigs are guilty because the newspaper reporter changed the story, the pigs got revenge on the wolf kind, he didn't get a chance to speak and it wasn't his fault the houses were poorly built. First of all, he just wanted a cup of sugar for his grandma's birthday cake. But the pigs wouldn't give Mr Wolf the tiny cup of sugar he needed to bake the cake. If Mr Wolf was big and bad why would he try baking a birthday cake, that's something an altruistic, benevolent wolf would do. Couldn't the pigs have been nice and helped Mr Wolf out by giving the cup of sugar for his grandma's birthday cake, but instead of giving him sugar the pigs acted very rudely. Furthermore, Mr Wolf also had a horrible cold that made matters worse. For you see he didn't mean to blow the first or second pigs house down that killed them, he didn't even aim to murder them it was an accident. His sneezes were truly uncontrollable! In support of this pigs one and two could've made their houses out of more durable material, just like their brother, pig number three. After he accidentally blew down the house, which killed the pigs. Then Mr Wolf thought there would be no point in leaving the pigs to rot plus stink the whole neighbourhood. Also it is in his natural diet so he ate the pigs. You might be thinking well Mr Wolf should've told someone, but if he did he would've gotten into even more trouble because the pigs wouldn't believe it was an accident. They would think Mr Wolf tried to straight up murder the pigs. Fourthly, the newspaper reporter changed the story. He thought a sick wolf wanting sugar wasn't interesting so they switched it to the BIG BAD WOLF with the huffing and puffing to blow the house down. Which shows that there has been a big injustice made. When the wolf got taken to jail the cops didn't stop to ask Mr Wolf what happened. So, it is unfair that Mr Wolf had to go to jail without even having a chance to explain THE REAL STORY. Mr Wolf isn't guilty! The pigs are, because they didn't stop to ask and that just shows that they didn't even care about what he had to say. They just went straight forward and accused him of killing the pigs. Lastly the pigs said: "Oh revenge is sweet", so that means Mr Wolf wasn't guilty because the pigs had revenge but for what? Plus, they thought revenge is sweet, sweet like candy which makes them EVIL. In conclusion I know that Mr Wolf is innocent because he didn't mean to blow the house down and kill the pigs, he just wanted a cup of sugar. Mr Wolf is innocent and who actually listened to his side of the story?

The True Story Of The 3 Little Pigs - Not Guilty

Mr. Wolf is not guilty, he was looking for a cup of sugar for his grandma's birthday. He didn't mean to blow down the pig's house, he had a cold, so he is not guilty. Mr. Wolf had a vigorous cold, and he accidentally blew down the pig's straw house. He did not intend to sneeze and collapse the house. Although, it's not his fault the house was built poorly. Besides, he had a robust cold, and he couldn't control his gargantuan sneezes, so he is not guilty. Mr. A wolf just needed some sugar for his grandmas birthday. After he accidentally blew down the 1st pigs straw house he was still in search of the sugar for his grandmas birthday. Besides, wouldn't you ask your neighbour for some sugar if you ran out? That is what he is doing. He is also pretty calm and kind. The 3rd little pig was rude to Mr. Wolf and his grandma, so he got mad and at that time his cold caught up to him and then he was sneezing at the door. Just then, the police showed up and thought that he was trying to break down the pigs door and then the police made a story about him but they wanted to spice up his story and then they made the line "Huff and puff and I'll blow your house down". But did the cops ever stop to ask him what he was doing? No, they didn't so the cops were just speculating that he was trying to break down the pig's door. So, therefore, Mr Wolf is not guilty. So, in conclusion, Mr. A Wolf had a gargantuan misunderstanding between the cops and so, therefore, Mr A Wolf is in fact: not guilty. Also, what would you do if you were in Mr. Wolf's position?
